How DePaul’s Mission is Reflected in its Enrollment Profile

DePaul’s mission is manifested in large part in its enrollment profile. That profile provides clear metrics of DePaul’s mission-based commitment to access and diversity.

The following four characteristics are important reflections of DePaul’s mission: low income, or Pell eligible; first-generation college student; from an underrepresented minority group, that is, being African-American, Hispanic/Latino or Native American; or a resident of the city of Chicago. The 4-dimension “tulip” design below, shows how these characteristics intersect.

More than half (55%) of all freshmen over the past five years have had at least one of these mission-based attributes and 4% had all four characteristics.
